Titan hopes smart watches would boost watch business

APURVA VENKAT
 Bengaluru, 27 August

Titan Company is pinning hopes on smartwatches to boost its watch business, one of its oldest divisions, which showed some softness in the past quarter.

In the June quarter, overall revenue from the watch business grew 14 per cent, and profit (before interest and tax) grew only four per cent. Operating margin of the business declined by 14 per cent.

Titan, the country's leading watchmaker and fifth in the world, launched its first smartwatch, JUXT, in January this year and has already sold 10,000 pieces. The company has since launched JUXPro, the next variant with more features, at ₹ 22,995, targeting the youth and technology freaks.

While the contribution of the smartwatches to its overall revenue is very low, the company hopes the launch will attract more excitement to the brand.

"The whole watch segment has been losing excitement, so we hope that comes back. The margins in the smartwatch are very low, as also the revenue contribution. However, we hope to see a positive impact of the excitement," said S Ravi Kant, chief executive, Titan Watches & Accessories. "We usually see our sales picking up during the festive season and wedding season. So, the numbers will go up."

The company is positive about the smartwatch segment, though analyst firm IDC reported a 32 per cent decline in sales of smartwatches globally in the June quarter, at 3.5 million. Market leader Apple sold 1.6 mn units less as compared with the previous quarter.

"While sales of Apple dropped, that of other small players increased. The decline was reported as the market leader witnessed a drop in sales but smartwatches are here to stay. We are different from the rest, as we are not a phone or a technology company but a watch-making company, which is coming up with smartwatches," said Kant.

Globally, Apple leads in the smartwatch segment with 47 per cent share, followed by Samsung (16 per cent) and Lenovo (nine per cent). Smartwatches account for a little less than five per cent of the overall watch industry, globally. The JUXPro smartwatch is available in 100 stores of Titan and they plan to extend it to a little more than 300. The company also has an exclusive tie up with e-commerce giant Flipkart and its smartwatches are also available on its own portal. The new smartwatch is touch-screen based, with functions such as camera control, fitness and safety control, as well as notification alerts. The company says it is targeting the age group of 25 to 35 years.

Kant said work is on for female-centric and affordable smartwatches, too.
